Madame Tussauds London will be marking one of Asia’s most colourful and popularly celebrated festivals, as it launches its first ever Diwali Weekend on 16th and 17th of October 2010.

Throughout the day guests will enjoy some of the authentic musical traditions of India, including sitar, flute and tabla players as well as traditional dance performed by accomplished classical musicians. The one-weekend-only event will be hosted in the popular ‘World Stage’ area and visitors can also get up close to wax figures of Bollywood superstars Shahrukh Khan, Aishwarya Rai, Amitabh Bachan and Salman Khan.

And to make the Diwali celebration even more complete, there will be a wide range of delicious Indian mithai’s (sweets) being sold at the Indian sweets hut. Visitors to the Diwali event will also be able to enjoy all the attractions Madame Tussauds has to offer from an A-list Hollywood Party to the brand new Marvel Super Heroes 4D.

To book online log in at www.madametussauds.com. Adult tickets from £14.

Notes to Editor:

Diwali, the Indian celebration popularly known as 'Festival of Lights' is celebrated by 1 million British Asians as well as Hindus, Sikhs and Jains across the globe. Diwali commemorates the triumph of good over evil and ushers in the Hindu New Year. It is celebrated with the coming together of families who share music, food and gifts.
